Wife of President Christens World's Master Dirigible

After Three Years Work the Akron Is Ready for Navy

OFFICIALS PRESENT Many Washington Officials Attend Ceremony at Akron, Ohio

AKRON, Ohio.—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover and a number of Washington officials arrived here at 11:30 Saturday morning.

She is scheduled to christen the zeppelin Akron during the afternoon.

World's Biggest Ship
By R. P. CRONING, JR.

AKRON, O.—(AP)—The fluttering of eight white pigeons in a mammoth hangar here Saturday marks the passing of another milestone in the history of American aeronautical progress.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the nation's chief executive released the birds as she christened the giant dirigible Akron, constructed by the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation for the United States Navy.

The Akron is not only the largest, swiftest and safest airship in the world, but is also one of the few in the world commissioned for military purposes.

The Akron will make her trial flights under command of Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and 60 officers and men.

The history of the Akron goes back to 1925, when Rear Admiral William A. Moffett convinced Congress that lighter-than-air craft was the present-day word in the air military program of the nation.

Congress authorized the construction of two giant dirigibles. And the government, in awarding its contract, helped to create a lighter-than-air industry in America.

Work Started in 1928
In July, 1927, a contract was awarded the Akron corporation, and a year later $200,000 was made available for construction. Shortly thereafter the Goodyear-Zeppelin company started erection of the mammoth air dock here.

Zeppelin patents held in Germany were obtained, and 13 experienced Zeppelin engineers were induced to come to Akron. Among them was Dr. Karl Arstein, world-famed Zeppelin builder.

Construction of the Akron was formally started November 7, 1929, when Rear Admiral Moffett drove a golden rivet into the master ring. Eight hundred men then went to work on the ship, and in a year and a half since then the queen of the air has steadily taken form.

Plan Ocean Passenger Ships
When the Akron takes to the air engineers probably will soon lay the groundwork for the second Zeppelin, the ZRS-2, and later the corporation expects to construct mammoth lighter-than-air craft for transatlantic service.

These commercial ships will be similar to the Akron, except that the military equipment will be replaced by accommodations for 100 passengers.

The Akron is 785 feet from stern to stern, nine feet longer than the world-girdling Graf Zeppelin. She has a capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet, almost twice as great as the Graf, and her maximum diameter is 132.9 feet.

Her eight motors develop 4,480 horsepower, and drive her at a maximum of 85 miles an hour. She can cruise 10,580 miles without refueling.

Her lifting gas in the non-explosive helium.

Her armament will include 16 heavy caliber machine guns and five fighting planes. These planes, resting in a hangar within the giant ship, can be released and recovered by a trapeze arrangement.

Health Service Plans Battle on Ship's Rats

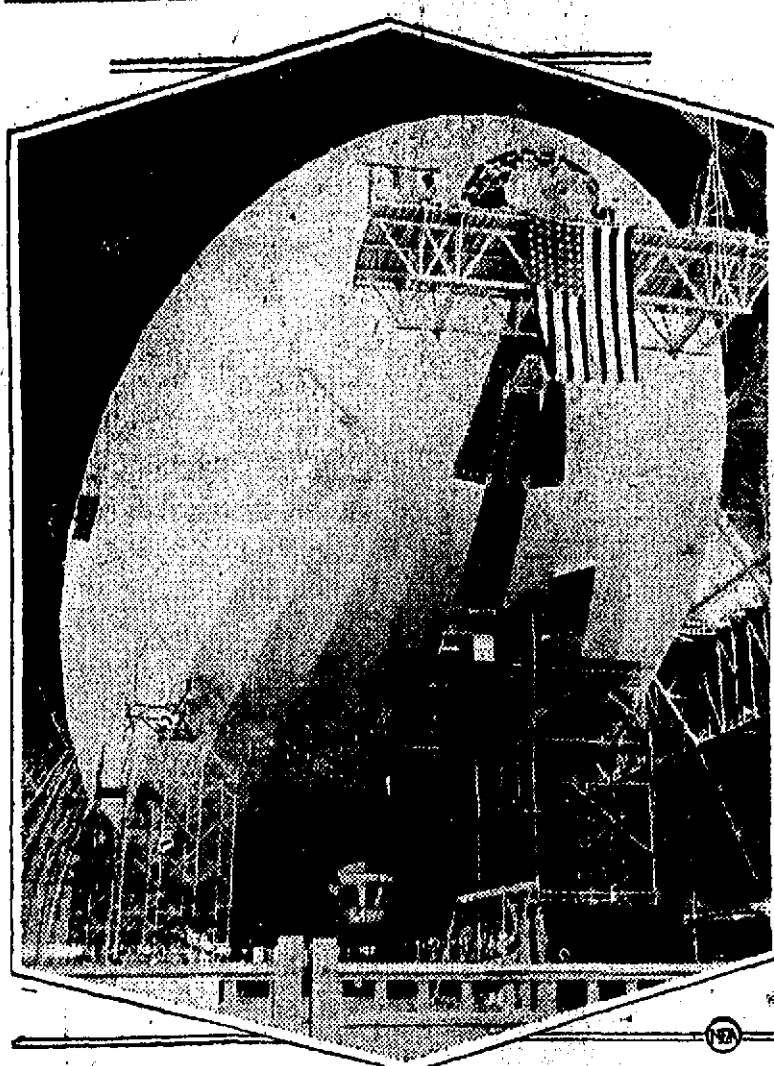

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Making sea-going vessels ratproof to check bubonic plague and other diseases is advocated by the public health service.

Ships so constructed that each compartment, section and subdivision is an isolated rat-proof space is urged by the service, along with sheathings, insulations, wire meshings, metal flashings to make vessels so inhospitable to rats they would be unable to find a home on the ocean.

The health experts said in a pamphlet made public Friday there was no reason, other than precedent, that rats should be considered so proverbial on shipboard that when they left, the ship was thought due to sink.

Only an on-board custom of ship construction friendly to rats, they argued, has permitted the rodents to spread disease from port to port.

Mrs. Hoover Christens Navy's New Airship

Here is a striking view of the U. S. S. Akron, the navy's new mammoth of the skies, which Mrs. Herbert Hoover christened at Akron, Ohio, on Saturday, August 8. Mrs. Hoover and Lieut.-Com. Charles E. Rosendahl, who will be in command of the sky dreadnaught when it takes the air in the near future are also shown.

Checking Up On Biggest Airship

Largest airship in the world—785 feet from stern to stern, nine feet longer than the Graf Zeppelin.

Gas capacity, 6,500,000 cubic feet, almost twice as great as the Graf. Maximum diameter, 132.9 feet—Graf 100 feet.

Powered by eight motors, with a total horsepower of 4,480. Maximum speed, 84 miles an hour.

Can cruise 10,580 miles without refueling; Graf 6,125. Lifting gas non-explosive helium.

The motors are located within the hull, and can be repaired in flight.

Will carry complete radio equipment, including television for transmission of maps and military photographs.

Duralumin, a light metal, used for flooring and furniture to keep down the weight.

Propellers are movable and can be used to raise, lower or retard the speed of the ship.

Armament, 16 heavy caliber machine guns and five fighting planes, carried in a hangar with the body.

Man power, 70 officers and men.

Commander, Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl.

More Unemployment in United States Forecast

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Fearful of an increase in unemployment next winter, the United States Chamber of Commerce has undertaken a study of the prospects with a view to presenting to President Hoover by September 1, a comprehensive plan to relieve the situation.

Silas Strawn, president of the chamber, and Julius Barnes, chairman of the board, discussed the employment problem with President Hoover for nearly an hour. Later, Strawn said a preliminary survey forecast there would be more unemployment in the coming months.

Farmers Week at University Ends

Extension Workers Remain for Conference on Future Problems

FAYETTEVILLE.—Farmers' Week is at an end. All that remained Friday night of the veritable city that existed here this week during the annual meeting of farm people were the deserted tents and camp grounds, fast being removed.

Programs ended at noon. But early Friday morning scores of men, women, boys and girls who have been here for the week began their homeward pilgrimage, getting an early start on what for many of them was an all day journey. Immediately after lunch on the exodus began in earnest, and by night almost no one is here except the group of Agricultural Extension Service workers who will remain until Tuesday for the annual conference which always follows Farmers' Week.

In their discussions of future problems, they will begin making plans for the fourteenth annual Farmers' Week and seventh annual state 4-H club camp next year.

Posse Search For Pine Bluff Negro Who Shot Woman

Wife of Lumber Company Employee Fired Upon by Unknown Black

USE BLOODHOUNDS

Fires With Shotgun as the Woman Starts Running Is Report

Mrs. McGehee, who was struck by the charge from a shotgun was not thought to be dangerously wounded.

Her husband, A. M. McGehee, is a lumber company employee.

He made a remark which she was unable to understand and when she started running the negro fired.

No Ice Reduction Planned in State

Railroad Commission Issues Statement Regarding Present Prices

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—General reduction of ice prices over the state is not contemplated by the Arkansas Railroad commission.

Recent reductions at individual points prompted inquiries of the commission as to whether such reductions indicated the commission sought price changes generally over the state in line with price changes in other communities.

Reece A. Caudle, member of the commission, said it was not practicable to attempt a sweeping reduction for the state, and explained the commission's view.

He said where ice prices were unsatisfactory, citizens of those localities usually petitioned for a hearing. The commission then hears all interested parties, and deals with the local situation.

"It would be almost impossible to work out a general schedule of prices for the state," he said, "as conditions in various towns vary. For instance, one town of 6,000 might have one ice manufacturer producing ice at a very low cost, selling it at a comparatively high price, and because of no competition, making a large profit."

Another town of the same size might have four ice manufacturers and because of competition, they all would be barely making a profit. Therefore, if the commission undertook to bring about a uniform price reduction, it would be unfair to some manufacturers and some communities, without actually hurting the manufacturers who already are making large profits."

Parker was being taken to Bayou Meto, 15 miles south of Stuttgart, for a preliminary hearing on a murder charge when the automobile in which he was riding with Deputy Sheriff Henry Lumsden, white farmer, and John Brooks, negro employed by Lumsden, was stopped.

Cummins said Lumsden and Brooks threatened him with shotguns and forced him to give up Parker, who was ordered to stand near the side of the road while Brooks fired a load of buckshot into his body, killing him instantly.

After the killing, Brooks was brought to the county jail at DeWitt by Lumsden. He was held without bond but Lumsden was granted bail. Cummins said he did not know why Lumsden participated in the shooting.

Parker was being taken to Bayou Meto to answer charges of murder in connection with the slaying of Sheriff Walter Flournoy, negro youth, who told officers that Parker had planned to kill him just before he killed Flournoy. ### Newspapers and the Utilities

IF in Kansas we see a classic battle going on between the Kansas City Star and Henry L. Doherty, public utility magnate, regarding a reduction in gas rates.

Mr. Doherty played what he imagined to be one of his trump cards last month when he sued the Star for 12 million dollars damages.

He played another one yesterday when he bought an interest in the Journal-Post, the only other newspaper besides the Star in Kansas City. But if Mr. Doherty imagined this was an ace card when he played it, he'll probably find out the deuce before the game is over.

There should be a law making it a criminal offense for public utility, its officers, or substantial stock owners, to acquire ownership of, or loan money to, any commercial newspaper.

The principle has always been recognized, and it is incorporated to a certain degree in the federal postal regulations which require every newspaper, daily or weekly, to file an ownership statement twice a year. The theory behind this regulation is that if the public knows that a utility company is interested in a newspaper, then the newspaper's influence will be automatically discounted by the community.

The fact that no criminal law has ever been adopted is probably due to the relatively strong position in which newspapers and themselves today. An example of this appears in the City Star. The Star has dominated Kansas City with both evening and a morning edition for nearly two generations.
 The Journal-Post has been carried as a losing competitive for all those years. F. G. Bonfils, now of the Denver Post, tried to own it. But Walter Dickey, multi-millionaire brick manufacturer wanted it—and Bonfils let him have it. Operating losses under Mr. Dickey's ownership were said to run $25,000 a week. Last winter Mr. Dickey died. Nobody wanted a white elephant newspaper, especially a family estate.
 When Henry L. Doherty decided his Cities Service company needed some editorial support he found it easy to buy.
 Any newspaper man could tell Mr. Doherty what kind of business judgment he is using—for the man who buys a newspaper with any other view than making money is a fool.

The first principle of sound business is to operate for profit. The service that a newspaper gives to its public, the trust that it inspires in its readers, and the money that it makes for itself, are all one thing. You can't separate these factors without inviting disaster. A newspaper simply happens to be the public forum of its community—and when the financial hand of a public utility is laid upon it, not only the forum vanishes, but the public's trust and the owners' profit go with it.

We know nothing about the merits of Mr. Doherty's suit against the Kansas City Star. But the people of Kansas City, and of Missouri and Kansas, swear by that newspaper. The position that the paper has taken is simply to criticize the utility charged by a gas company monopoly operating under state regulation. When Mr. Doherty sued the Star for damages, he forgot that his case is different from that of a private business man. Private business has to gamble on making a profit. But Mr. Doherty and his Cities Service company are the beneficiaries of state regulation. They get a guaranteed rate—and it is the public's privilege to challenge that rate whenever and however it happens to want to.

And when Mr. Doherty bought the Journal-Post he not only forgot all this, but he made the incredible blunder of permitting the Star to show that as a newspaper publisher
 the president of Cities Service company isn't even a good oil and gas man. And you can bet the Star will do that.

From an Interview

"WELL," he said as he arose to go, "I am going back to my farm and let the world go its own gait. I am happy there. Nothing can disturb me. In the worst years that can come I will have plenty to support my family. I will have my books and papers and know what is going on outside, but I am safe. Panics and trade revolutions do not affect me at all, and even a revolution would hardly disturb me in my quiet book."

No, this is not a quotation from an interview with a magnate on the market this week, though it might well pass for such. It is from an interview published in 1894, a year when times were as hard as they are now if not harder. The sentiment could easily be found today, and it is, of course, a source of strength in bearing up under a terrific strain. But there weren't the taxes to pay then that there are now, and that is something, as every taxpayer will testify.—

High Explosives!

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON. — Regardless of who may have conceived the latest plan for saving Germany and irrespective of whether the plan is anything to brag about, it is obvious that the astute Undersecretary of State William R. Castle attempted to put over some splendid publicity for the administration and that the attempt was gunned up by none other than Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson.

Castle's assiduity in obtaining the utmost credit for President Hoover has been noted before and so has Stimson's penchant for getting things gunned up. But this is the first time that the respective tendencies of these two distinguished statesmen have clashed on such a delicate matter as that of picturing Mr. Hoover as a world savior and that is why you now hear predictions here that Castle will be the next secretary and perhaps before very long.

Dividing the Honors

Castle was here working with Hoover throughout the save-Germany negotiations and handling the publicity. Stimson arrived to represent us at Paris and London after France, through haggling, had accepted the debt moratorium plan.
 After the statesmen had hashed things over and it seemed apparent that Germany couldn't get anything more than a prolongation of existing credits Castle suddenly announced a new "Hoover plan" providing for prolongation of existing credits and a committee of experts to study the German situation and the question of how best to turn short-term credits into long-term credits. Stimson promptly denied at London that there was any new plan, insisting later that the Castle-Hoover plan was old stuff already thoroughly discussed, referring to it as a British-American plan and giving much credit to Premier Mac-Donald. One also observes that credit for the extension of the $100,000,000 Helmsbank credit is given by the French to their own

 M. Moret, governor of the Bank of France.

But the point is that this government wanted that plan to be known as a "Hoover plan" pushed forward at a critical moment to save the situation. Stimson spoiled the effect and all good friends of Mr.
 Hoover are pretty sore. It is impossible to say whether Stimson merely didn't get the point of the Castle announcement and didn't realize the importance of giving the president full credit or whether he was sincere in thinking that the credit should be divided.

His Other "Bulls" — Without choosing sides between Stimson and Castle, it must be admitted that the incident has recalled some of Stimson's previous "bulls" to the obscurity of his better achievements. There was the time at the London naval conference when Hoover was issuing a statement condemning the consultative pact idea while Stimson in London was explaining the kind of a consultative pact this country would accept. And his declaration of an embargo on arms to Brazil,
 designed to bolster a government
 which was promptly overthrown.
 And his sharp note to Russia after the Manchurian war scare was all over.

One of Stimson's strongest points has been considered his implicit obedience to Hoover, but Castle has been much more active in promoting the president's interests and advancing his own cause at the same time. Stimson is said to dis-is consummated is the selection of a day from a visit to Texarkana.

 was in the city Thursday.

Undiscovered Glaciers Found by Graf Zepplin

BERLIN.—(P)—While the Graf Zeppeline was on her Arctic cruise she passed over so many undiscovered glaciers, mountain ranges, bays and other geographical features that there were not enough names to go around.
 Professor Rodolphe Samoilovitch, scientific director of the expedition said Thursday.

Breaking the silence imposed by a German newspaper contract, he expressed his elation over the results of the cruise, but was careful to say nothing sensational had been encountered and nothing of the kind had been expected.

He did, however, say the Graf did not go to the North Pole.

 bomb by Captain Albert W. Stevens, famous photographic expert of the U. S. Army Air Corps, over lower Man-

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

It is that pale delaying hour
When nature closes like a flower,
And in the spirit hallowed lies
The silence of the earth and skies.
The world has thoughts she will not own
When shades and dreams with night
have flown;
Bright over-head, the early star
Makes golden guesses what they are.
A light lies here, a shadow there,
With little winds at play between;
As though the elves were delving where
The sunbeams vanished in the green.
The softest clouds are flocking white
Among faint stars with centers gold—
Slowly from daisied fields of night,
Heaven's shepherds fills his airy fold.

Community Names

How did the rural communities of your trade area obtain their names? Here is a possible source of many interesting features. A study made in Dane county where 121 groups large enough to have social significance and consciousness of group unity were considered, found 39 names to have originated in natural phenomena such as hills, valleys, streams, prairies, corners, ridges, lakes and groves. Family names were responsible for 32 group names, and 15 derived from places of former residence. Accidents had created only six.—Wisconsin Press.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

dogged by a restlessness which would not let her go. Over the breakfast table she and Clive spoke of casual matters. Both were uneasy.

After he had gone she sat for a long time listless. The servant came and dolefully set the place to rights. Her life ran on wall dilled wheels, she reflected. There was nothing she needed to do. No one needed her—except possibly Van. Clive was utterly self-sufficient. He had his horses and dogs in the country. He had the business now to absorb his thoughts.

Even her mother no longer needed her. Cass was happy, independent, playing better than she had ever played before. She looked younger, less harried.

"I must see her," Liane decided.

Cass was just getting up when Liane arrived. The little apartment looked comfortable and shabby. The lovely green brocade couch Liane had given her was a curious anomaly in the small, untidy room. Liane saw the familiar room with new eyes, eyes that had somehow grown critical.

Cass entered, struggling into her old red corduroy dressing gown. "I hate to wear that lovely dress," she said. "I feel like a queen."

"What's on your mind, baby?" Cass asked, watching the girl shrewdly.

Liane shut her eyes. Now for it. Now for the plunge. She said, "I'm going to leave Clive."

Cass set down her cup with great deliberation. "Why? You're not happy with him?"

Liane put out her hand in an impulsive gesture. "It's not that. Clive's splendid. She hesitated before she flung the words at Cass. "I love Van Robard. I'm going away with him."

Cass swayed a little. Her face had gone dead white. Liane thought she was going to faint.

"Mother, what's the matter?" She was bending over the older woman, shaking her arm. Liane left her and, flying into the tiny kitchen, brought back a glass of water.

Cass sipped it and shook her head. "Take it away. I'm all right."

Conscience-stricken at the effect of her news Liane sat down again.

"I'm sorry," she began contritely. "I didn't know it would be such a shock to you. I—I had to tell someone."

The color was coming back into Cass's pale cheeks. She shook her head. "He's a swimmer, freeing himself from the bondage of the sea. In a dull voice she said, "There's something you've got to know. I should have told you long ago. God forgive me for a miserable coward."

Her eyes, her tone, struck terror into the heart of the girl. Liane trembled. "What is it?"

Oh, mother, don't look like that! Tell me."

WALKING like an old woman, like someone who has been dealt a mortal blow, Cass rose. She went to the shabby, littered desk in the corner. There was one drawer which Liane knew had always been locked. From this she drew a roll of papers held together by a rubber band.

"These," she said, tapping the roll. "I'll explain. I will show them to you in a minute." She sat down heavily.

"First of all you must know this. You are not my child at all. You are my sister Luisa's daughter."

Liane whispered, "Wasn't I?"

Cass's laugh was short and bitter. "Yes, she was married right enough. The license is here. I'll show it to you in a minute. The man broke her heart. She died when you were born. That's why I hate the whole clan," she finished bitterly.

Still Liane did not understand. "What clan?" she asked.

Cass threw the words at her. "The Robards," she cried.

The girl winced as though someone had struck her. "You mean—"

"Van's father was Dirk Robard. So was yours."

Liane flung her hands to her eyes. This was unendurable. She said abruptly, "It's not true. Mrs. Amberton told me long ago." She struggled to remember.

"What's not true?"

"Van is not Dirk Robard's son. He was adopted. Fanny Amberton's words came back to her now. 'He married Van's mother in 1913. That was three years after I was born.'"

Cass murmured, "I don't believe it."

"It's true," Liane persisted. "I don't remember what Mrs. Amberton said Van's real name was but he was Dirk Robard's adopted son."

"It may be so," Cass mused, half to herself. "I was in England in 1913, just before the war started. Mother was taking care of you then."

She whirled on Liane. "But it doesn't alter the main facts of the case," she cried. "Half brother or step brother, he's still forbidden to you. He's wicked—conscienceless."

Liane asked, "Why did you hate him so?"

"Because Dirk Robard was wicked, cruel. He met Luisa in Baltimore where she was playing in stock. He was much older—15 or 20 years. He persuaded her to have a secret marriage. They went somewhere on the eastern shore. Luisa didn't tell us until a few months before you were born. By that time he was tired of the arrangement. He was having an affair with some New Orleans beauty and wanted Luisa to divorce him. Poor child! She was so young, so bewildered. She wrote me and told me about it. I brought her home. She died 10 days after you were born. The doctor said she had no will to live."

"And you never heard from him?"

my—my father?" Liane whispered.

CASS tossed her head. "Luisa didn't want us to let him know where she was. He never, so far as I know, tried to find her. When she died I mailed him the death notice. He sent lawyers to see us. He had heard there was a child but wasn't sure. I lied to the lawyers. I was afraid they might take you because you were his own flesh and blood. There was some clause in his will, I believe, to the effect that if an heir should appear such a claim was to be thoroughly examined. I think he always suspected there had been a child, but he couldn't prove it. Tom Barrett and I had been married the year before. It was easy for me to pretend you were our daughter."

Her voice softened. "And then I felt, too, that you truly belonged to me. I cared for you from babyhood. I loved you as my own. I was justified in keeping you from that devil."

Liane's eyes were brimming. She put her arm around the older woman. "Of course you were," she soothed. "And when it was so hard, when we were so desperately poor you must often have repented your decision to keep me."

Cass sat up straight. "Repented? Never! You were mine and I meant to have you."

Liane laced her fingers nervously. "Clive knows this?" she asked.

Cass nodded. "I told his mother shortly before you were married. I told him. It was only right. They had to know."

They sat for a few moments in silence. Then Cass broke out again. "You'll never go to Van Robard now?"

"I don't know. I don't know. My mind is dizzy from all this."

"Liane, you can't. You wouldn't hurt Clive so."

The girl moaned. "I hadn't thought of that."

"You must. Forget this man. He's had dozens of affairs. The women of his own world understand him. You made the mistake of taking him seriously."

Cass added, "Tell me I did right to hold you for my own. Tell me you forgive—"

"Mother, dearest!" It was Liane's answer.

Cass wiped her eyes presently. "Heavens, I must rush! They called rehearsal for this afternoon."

Together they straightened the place. Liane, a towel planned over her dove-colored frock, made the bed and wiped dishes. Constraint held them after their mutual burst of emotion.

"Promise me you won't do anything without telling me first," was all Cass dared to ask on parting.

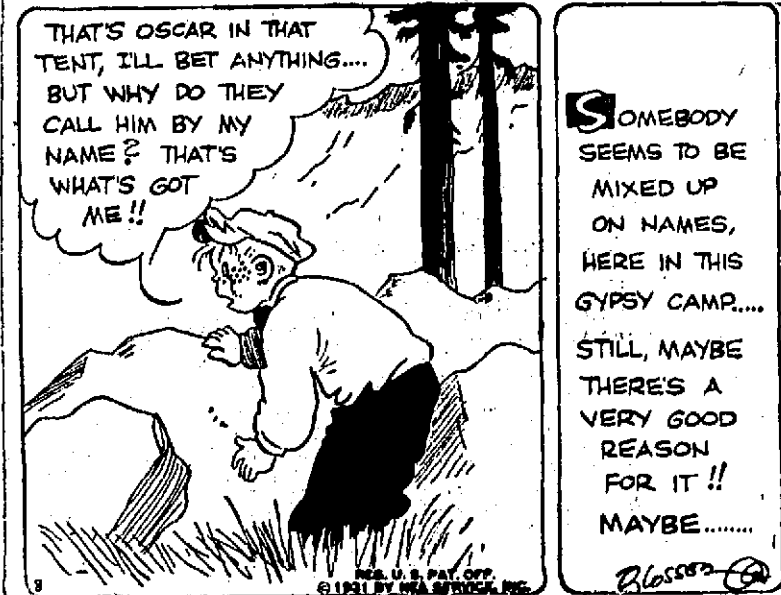

Liane walked up Broadway, a slim, distinguished figure. Some impulse, born of the old trouper habit, caused her to stop and buy a paper at the corner. Like a needle to a magnet her eyes were drawn to the headline, "Millionaire Killed in Motor Accident."

The name leapt at her, dizzily black, "Van Robard."

Officer in Tennessee Dies, Slayer Jailed

MEMPHIS.—(A) J. W. Lunsford, 62, Ripley, a Lauderdale county deputy sheriff, was dead Thursday as a result of a shot gun wound inflicted Sunday night when he and a fellow officer sought to arrest Clyde Arwood at Hale's Point, near Ripley.

Lunsford died at a hospital here Wednesday night after his left arm had been amputated when gangrene developed.

Lunsford and another deputy went when they said, they had a report he had beaten his sister-in-law because she refused to give him a pistol.

Officers said that Arwood, now in jail at Ripley, will be charged with murder.

Hooks And Slides

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

ERNEST SCHAEFFER'S second knockout of James Maloney was no ballyhoo. Maloney really beat Primo Carnera twice. . . . Both Birkko and Retzlaff turned down a semi-windup against Stanley Fox, Stribling eard at the Clarendon.

Football has become the national game in Samoa. . . . The natives all shout "Give us Samoa!"

Maie Hans thinks the Senators are through. . . . but that those Yankees are still to be feared. . . . Light-weight Tracy Cox of Indianapolis has knocked out 17 opponents in his last 23 fights. . . . Henri Cochet, the French volleyer, weighs only 135 and stands 5 feet 6 inches.

July 22. Meanwhile, also, it is possible that Sharkey, beating Walker, might nudge Carnera out of the picture before 1932, saving Herr Schmeling the pains.

A Turnstile Eye?

HERR SCHMELING and Joe Jacobs would like very much to meet Mickey Walker. I am not so sure they are crazy. I tangle with Sharkey. Herr Schmeling took a lot of abuse from the sailor before that sad foul put an end to the proceedings.

They would have nothing to fear from Carnera, if the Ambling Alp is to be rated off his two stumbling sessions against Jim Maloney. But surely a better gate could be built up by waiting.

Perhaps within a year, Herr Schmeling's eye will be O. K. By that time the customers will be wild for a fight. It seems to me that, black or not, the Herr who is the victor in their brawl, a pretty fair eye for business.

Thumbs Down

MAX says Willie stuck his thumb into that eye. Some observers say that in defending himself against a vicious right, he put his own thumb into the injured orb. Either Willie has the greatest thumb ever thrust into a glove or he must have driven Max's thumb into the eye hard enough to put a bump on the back of his neck. At any rate, you can put me on record as voting thumbs down on the black eye story.

The evident aim of Herr Schmeling is to wait a year while steam generates for another heavyweight championship affair. Both Sharkey and Walker, by that time, will be a year older and no farther ahead, no matter who is the victor in their brawl.
